A Friendly Ocean Animal

There are many animals in the ocean that people should stay away from. Dolphins are not an animal that people should fear. While they are wild animals, they are actually quite friendly around humans. Some dolphins like to be social with humans. This involves them swimming along boats that are floating in the water.

Dolphins are playful animals that like to swim and jump in the water. There are even places around the world where people can swim with dolphins.

A Fierce Ocean Animal

Sharks are one type of animal to stay far away from in the ocean. While sharks are not necessarily malicious and mean toward humans, humans could be mistaken by sharks as prey. Sharks are great hunters that eat other animals in the ocean. There have been cases around the world where people have been bitten by sharks. This could be because a shark may have thought that the human was a seal or another animal they feed on.
